“ Deidre was the love of my life and soul mate and I am devastated by her sudden passing. She meant everything to me and was everything to me. I cannot express in words the terrible sadness and grief I am feeling. I love her with all my heart and soul and will miss her until we are reunited in Heaven. Sleep now in the Lord, my darling. I will be with you again someday. I feel your presence with me. Rest In Peace, my beautiful girl. I LOVE YOU!!!! XOXOXO

“ I was deeply saddened to learn of the passing of Deidra Robbio. Deidra and I dated all the way back in 1990-91, she was 21 years old and I was 27. She had boundless energy, a contagious smile, a wicked sense of humor and a big heart. We spent a year together and travelled to the UK and France as well as visiting her family in the Boston area; I fondly remember her sister's wedding. She talked to me often about losing her dad when she was just a little girl and advised me to read On Death and Dying and understood that this would help me later in life when I faced the loss of my own father. After we split up, we didn't maintain a friendship but I did remain in contact with her wonderful mother, Grace from whom I learnt this sad news. As I get older, the news that people that touched my life have passed away is becoming a more frequent reality and a reminder that we should always appreciate the present moment of existence and the brief time allotted to us.
