“ This man was a brother to me in our younger ages we hunted, partied, tore up our parents trucks In The mud and fought After going into the service we became brother in laws as he married my sister, and had a beautiful baby girl with her, he was a great father amd loves her very much, he went through alot in war amd fought to keep it together whe. He hot back to the states and tried to mk ove on with life but couldn't never get the help he needed through the VA as many soldiers dont. He suffered as did the family. It is very hard to understand as a person who has never shot a man or kid to know how it changes your mind set and if never listened to his stories I would not have felt his pain, although not in the same way. He was a great man and loved his wife and child tremendously, he will be greatly missed and his spirit will live on.we shall salute CPL Reese, we love you you Brother.

I met Jamie at Santa Fe College shortly after getting out the hospital from a bad Harley wreck that almost killed me at the University of Florida. A couple years prior, on the other side of campus, I lost my best friend from childhood To addiction. When I met Jamie, it was instant that we became friends. I'm not quick to trust people, but I knew instantly Jamie was solid. We both rode around campus in electric wheelchairs and the way he was able to bring my morale up is something I will never forget. Jamie came to visit me in Vero Beach a couple years ago the last time I saw him. I'm so grateful he did come. I'm sorry for the loss as we have all lost and amazing man with a heart of gold & a proud Marine. I will remember him and I will always be grateful of the impact he had on my life. I had to have met him at the time in my life that I did for a good reason & he's most likely a reason I'm still here. Watch over us all, help us stay Motivated the rest of our lives with obstacles we face.... I will see you again Marine! ~ Semper Fidelis

I met Jamie at Santa Fe College during a mentally low point in my life. I had recently been in a bad motorcycle wreck which I almost lost my leg. I met him after getting out of the hospital from the wreck that almost killed me at the University of Florida. A couple years prior, on the other side of campus, I lost my best friend from childhood. When I met Jamie, it was instant that we became friends. I'm not quick to trust people, but I knew instantly he was solid. We both rode around campus in electric wheelchairs and the way he was able to bring my morale up is something I will never forget. yes, the first encounter I had with him was him reaching out and helping me outside the VA office at Santa Fe college. Jamie came to visit me in Vero Beach a couple years ago the last time I saw him. I'm so grateful he did come. I'm sorry for the loss as we have all lost an amazing man with a heart of gold & a proud Marine. I will remember him and I will always be grateful of the impact he had on my life. I had to have met him at the time in my life that I did for a good reason & he's most likely a reason I'm still here.
