“ The Brodsko's will miss Lon, The Herrick's lived in the house behind ours for many years. Our children played together and we shared many good memories. Lon's distinctive laugh would waft over the fence and we would take the shortcut to hang out for a drink. Our daughter Kris was about 4 years old then, and played with Angie. She was afraid of Lon (but make note; she was afraid of most men), One day Lon just went upstairs to let Kris stay in the house and play. She sat on Dianne's lap and asked if Lon was now on the roof so she could get down and feel safe. As she grew up we all would tell the story and laugh about it. One more distinctive memory was when we called the cops on Lon. Apparently Lon took the convertible out for a drink one evening, and forgot his house key. He was trying to break into his own house and we heard a noise that sounded like someone was breaking into their house....we snuck through the shortcut to see a male figure in the dark banging on the back door. We rushed back and called the police. In the mean time we called their house just to see if someone would answer. Sure enough, Lon had gotten in and answered the phone. We then had to tell him why the police would soon be knocking on his door. All was well, and we had laughs about it for many years years. Lon was a caring father, a solid, loving and fair minded husband. We will miss him. He put up a good fight through many health issues, He adapted to his limitations and didn't complain.

“ Through holiday get-togethers I found Lon to be soft spoken, very easy going, with a good sense of humor and always a smile on his face. He was a loveable husband, father and grandfather. A genuinely fine person in my opinion. It was a pleasure to know Lon over the years and he will be surly missed by all those who have known him. Mike Holland

GF

With sadness, I read today that Lon had passed in November. We met in high school and he and his family were so kind to me during a transition stage in my life. May you Rest In Peace until we meet again. And I pray Gods richest blessings on Dianne and the children and extended family. With deepest sympathy, Ginny.
